Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Gr 9 Up—Rosie Sinclair wants to be a filmmaker. When she's selected to go to the elite Forge School—part art school, part reality show—she thinks her dream is coming true as long as she makes the fifty cuts. But when Rosie skips her mandatory pill that makes her sleep for a full twelve hours, she begins to unravel the truth behind what the Forge School is hiding. A mixture of science fiction and contemporary fiction, this novel is an interesting addition to both genres. However, despite the fact that the Forge School is a reality show, not much is done with that concept other than occasional references to cameras and viewers; this element adds little to the novel. The plot is fast paced at the beginning and end, but the middle section often is slow, bogging down the action with Rosie's relationship with Linus, a cafeteria worker, and Burnham, the son of pharmaceutical reps who provide the school with the sleep pills. The work also falls victim to being fairly repetitive; some scenes feel like they happen over and over again without progressing the story. It struggles to fully explain its own science. The final explanation for Rosie's actions may leave readers confused.—Paige Garrison, Aurora Central Public Library, CO

Review

“A sharp novel about the ways in which everyone can be manipulated, either through editing or one's own desire to go the easiest path.” ?BCCB

“Like O'Briens Birthmarked trilogy, this dystopian, sci-fi, psychological-thriller hybrid raises ethical and moral questions about science. This might have been a difficult story to pull off, given the environment, but with a likable narrator who is thoroughly unimpressed with herself, it works . . . this should have wide appeal.” ?Booklist

“Fans looking for a science fiction novel that is not heavy on the science fiction or who want something vaguely dystopian will enjoy this title.” ?VOYA

“A mixture of science fiction and contemporary fiction, this novel is an interesting addition to both genres.” ?School Library Journal

“A fast, satisfying psychological thriller . . . The sudden cliffhanger will polarize readers.” ?Kirkus Reviews

“Like viewers of The Forge Show, readers will want to keep watching Rosie.” ?Publishers Weekly
