Enter Emily, who becomes Becca and Edward's common denominator when a quirk of fate gives them joint custody of the precocious little girl.

Suddenly, two people who have never met find themselves sharing the trials and tribulations of domestic life as they navigate the rocky shoals of parenthood, from naptime to play dates to preschool admissions. And amid the daily demands of raising a young child, Becca and Edward discover something else: They're made for each other.

Editorial Review

From Publishers Weekly

Brown (Legally Blonde) has come up with another winning premise. Becca Reinhart, a scrappy, self-made 31-year-old workaholic on Wall Street's fast track, loves her job and has no interest in snagging a husband. Edward Kirkland, a genteel, good-natured bachelor in his mid-30s, is content to handle the family's philanthropies and don a tux to dine for a good cause most evenings. He is expected to marry Bunny Stirrup, daughter of neighbors in the Hamptons, but is in no hurry to do so. Becca and Edward are thrust together when they become the co-guardians of Emily Stearns, a four-year-old suddenly orphaned by the death of both parents. Emily's mother had been Becca's best friend, and her father Edward's. Precocious Emily, heir to a fortune, desperately needs love and attention. Becca gives up business meetings in Paris and Stockholm to see that Emily is accepted into the right nursery school. Edward gives up his treasured "irresponsible solitude," as well as his regular squash game, to play hide and seek. The less-than-maternal Bunny, threatened by Becca and the change in Edward's lifestyle, connives with his mother to hasten their nuptials, going so far as to engage a wedding coordinator and place an announcement in the Sunday Times. Edward is bewildered, but he's too much of a dutiful son to call a halt—even though lately he finds himself wondering what it would be like to kiss Becca. The hasty and contrived climax defies credibility, but this featherlight charmer makes a perfect beach read.

Becca Reinhart and Edward Kirkland couldn't be more different. Becca is a powerful and successful venture capitalist who schedules her life down to the minute, thrives on high-pressure situations, and craves the rush of sealing a deal. Edward, born into money, lives a life of leisure and relaxation as head of his family's philanthropy efforts and whose hobby is dating as many beautiful women as possible. When Becca and Edward find out they are co-guardians of little four-year-old Emily, preschool interviews soon take precedence over business meetings, and bedtime stories replace benefit galas. Two strangers thrust into parenthood, Becca and Edward blindly maneuver their way through domestic life trying to create a stable new environment for Emily. But when Edward announces his engagement to a young society woman, Becca faces the prospect of going back to her old fast-paced lifestyle or finding a way to keep the joy she's found with Emily and Edward. Brown, the author of Legally Blonde (2001), spins a fun and charming tale of love and instant parenthood. Carolyn Kubisz
